FREEDOM'S
THANKSGIVING
DAY

ET Cetera... that which is in this world
is not of the flesh, but of the spirit.

Baptized in blood at Lexington, the nation
calls it blessed.
It drops not a feather for the nation
King's blood.

Its stars reflect new glory underneath the autumn sky.
Its wadded skirts of white and red add to the beauty of the day.

No more the weary river rolls between the blue and gray.
And all the while the land's
Thanksgiving day.

The harvest song still thrives where the golden wheat is ripe.
Through the fields of the sea of endless grain.

The cities cheer with labor for the work-
man's eager hand.
Our granaries grow with richest store,
no hunger in the land.

The cotton's little family on the rugged mountain side
Takes up the song of plenty till it echoes
far and wide.

And we send across the hills as they waxless rise and fall
This message to the nation: "We have food enough for all!"

God smiles upon the nation that has set a people free.
We worship him at Freedom's shrine from striving sea to sea.

The boy who drives the cattle home across the meadow Looks up with pride nor feels ashamed beside the rich man's heir;

Our native ride the oceans with our starry
flag unfurled.
Our traders bear their cargoes to the harbors of the world.

Aye, look up to our lands as fair and direct as California.
Come armies that help to crown the glad
Thanksgiving day.

Old glory proudly waves to-day over battlefields afar.
The foreign foe humbled beneath the clouds of our stars.

Aye, every star that dots our flag upon the land and main Recounts the story of the men who crushed
the might of Spain.

No longer ride the battle fields, no longer
flash their guns.
The seal of alliance that been placed on
with Freedom's sons.

With victory on our banners fair we grateful kneel and pray.
And thank the watchful Father for this great Thanksgiving day.

There's plenty in the southland where to white the cotton bolls.
There's plenty in the northland 'neath
Katharine's crest of snows.

The east has heard the reaper's song o'er cumbrous fields
The golden corn has gathered 'round on many a westerly shore.

The winter has no terrors for the land we dearly love.
The skies that promise happy times are blue and bright above.

Our nation, in its splendor can take up the glad refrain:
"Our Father, Thou hast blessed us. Let Thanksgiving come again!"

We've seen the years fall from His hand
like leaves in the wind.
The crown He set on our land is harvest's crown of gold.

The anthem of Thanksgiving, rising high
'neath sea and sky.
Stir every heart that beats beneath the banner of the free.

In the turmoil of the battle we were born
to follow the world.
Our fathers on historic fields our matchless flag unfurled.

With five and forty stars to light to greater deeds the way.
We as a nation celebrate this glad Thanksgiving day.

O bells that tell the story of our country's rise to fame.
Ring out the strains of glory 'neath the flag we love to name.

With plenty all around us can lift the joyful strain.
And the harvest song is echoed in the nation's heart again!

Let the benediction sweep o'er the land
from shore to shore.
Shake the mountains with the chorus:
"Praise the Lord forevermore!"

Praise our Father for His goodness, reaching far from sea to sea.
He has blessed us as a nation. He has made and kept us free!"

T. C. HARRINGTON.

A Redemptive Venture.
"It is certainly a terrible thing," mused
the turkey, as it saw the farmer, equipped with his ax, "to be cut off like this in my prime. But after all death has its compensation. At least I shall have no more Thanksgiving jokes about getting it in the neck." — N. Y. Journal.

A Progression.
Thanksgiving comes it glad array,
The poet's bound cry.
With turkey and mince pie one day
— And biliousness the next.
— Washington Star.

The Dinners They Had.
Tommy—I had to go to bed for three days
after our Thanksgiving dinner.
Johnny—Huh! I had the same six kinds of medicine after ours. — N. Y. Truth.

COWS ON A SPREE.

East Jersey Apple-Jack and Act Like Bibulous Humans.

After They Got Enraptured Over They Gave Milk Punch and Pass the Spree On — Unusual Banquet Held.

George Rice, who lives near Newton, in Mercer county, N. Y., made elder a few days ago. After extracting the juice from the ground apples he threw the pounce, or "thresher," over into a lot in which two Alderney cows belonging to J. D. Dilworth were pastured.

The pounce fermented in the sun, and on Wednesday afternoon the two Alderneys were turned into the lot. They soon discovered the reason, and behavior of it, so much infected that they gave a supper of corn meal and outright tonight. Next morning the cows gave no milk, and Mr. Dilworth was told in his denunciation of the milk-men who had milked the cows before he could do so.

The cows were turned out the lot where their actions soon attracted the attention of their owners. They entered about the pasture, walking stiff-legged, now and then leaning against the fence in much the same way that a man who is intoxicated will do. At intervals they belched noisily and attempted to rub their heads up against the fence. These attempts, however, resulted disastrously, as the animals
made a complete circle and soon found that he had a couple of very drunken cows.

The news spread and all day
Thursday were the victors to see the cows on a spree. The cows kept up their curious conduct all day long, but had apparently become sober Friday morning. The results of their spree were apparent, however, until the next evening, as they gave no milk for Wednesday evening until Saturday evening.

Charles Zwielen, who keeps a hotel
at Yardville, was one of the visitors,
and paid a big price for the first milking, which, as he anticipated, proved to be a "milk punch" party. The milk and Jersey apple-jack. This he took to his hotel, where his friends already there was an unusual banquet.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION

"These are the sort who would expect me to pray, I suppose. That is religion. To pray? I should like to see that!"

Yet, when the long walk brought her to the water's edge, she did kneel and pray, and she was up her nose through the air, and she looked at her feet, and she said:

"To whom can I pray? I have no friend, no father, no mother, no God, I am all alone. For me there is only death. Welcome! Welcome! There is only death, black death! With that thought, she arose, stepped to the pier's edge, and threw off her cloak as she prepared to go to bed."

A sound of music arrested her attention. The Salvation Army was tuning the black band that night. She stood and listened, and a voice from those words cried to her soul:

"My friends, come, make haste! Take up the Lord's prayer!"

In the arms of the Lord she knelt, and she prayed, and she was up her nose through the air, and she looked at her feet, and she said:

"The slender figure stood quietly, calm, a woman's [then trembled violently. She looked down at her feet, and she said:]
